

Your greatest gift

By remembering The Apuldrum Centre in your will, you ensure generations of adults with learning disabilities have independent, active and fulfilling lives.

How to leave a gift in your will

It is very simple to include The Apuldrum Centre as a beneficiary in your will. You will need to provide this information to your solicitor:

The Apuldrum Centre
Appledram Lane South
Chichester
PO20 7PE

Registered charity number: 801169

If you don't yet have a will, please use a solicitor to draw one up. Any solicitor local to you should be able to provide help or advice. There are three main ways to leave a gift in your will:

- A share of your estate
- A cash gift
- A specific named item, such as a piece of jewellery

Most charitable gifts in wills are also tax free.

Talk to us about your wishes. We are happy to talk with you about your gift and intentions, and can answer any questions you may have.

Thank you so much for considering a gift in your will to The Apuldrum Centre.

Care for adults with learning disabilities for generations to come

Your legacy gift can make a huge difference to a small local charity like The Apuldrum Centre.

What does The Apuldram Centre mean to you?

Rory Massey
Chief Executive Officer

For some, it's home, a place to live and thrive. For others, it's somewhere to work and learn new skills. For many of us, it's a welcoming café and friendly shop.

But above all, for almost everyone I speak to, The Apuldram Centre means family. A community of love, care and support, where adults with learning disabilities lead fulfilling lives and reach their potential.

Whether you have volunteered, donated, fundraised, visited our café or bought something at our shop, thank you. You are part of the Apuldram family.

With your generosity, this special charity has been supporting people across West Sussex and beyond since 1989. Thousands of people have benefited from your care – through our community hub, daycare and supported living.

You can keep caring for adults with learning disabilities in the future, too, by leaving a gift in your will to The Apuldram Centre.

Family comes first, of course, when you make or amend your will. But could you also consider a gift to your Apuldram family? Because we're a small charity, any donation, no matter the size, will make an enormous difference.

Your gift is a way for your care and compassion to live on. You'll give independence, dignity and choice to future adults with learning disabilities – and ensure The Apuldram Centre is here for generations to come.

Thank you so much for considering a gift in your will.

Rory

Why a gift in your will is so important

One of the most important decisions you will ever make is choosing who to include in your will. By remembering The Apuldram Centre, you will keep caring for adults with learning disabilities, far into the future. We're a small charity, so a gift in your will can have a huge impact.

Your legacy gift will:

- Ensure adults with learning disabilities have the life they want, achieving their goals and ambitions.
- Provide a safe, fulfilling and caring home for individuals through supported living accommodation.
- Give purpose, choice and dignity to adults with learning disabilities, through our shop, day centre and work in the community.

A gift in your will could be the most significant donation you ever make

When Jenny Thurgut and husband Gerry tasted some delicious jam in a Chichester B&B and set out to buy some to take home, the trail led them to The Apuldram Centre.

Now, years later, Apuldram has become like family – and Jenny has included the charity in her will...

"We stopped to buy jam that day, and three hours later came out with plants, scones and new friends!" said Jenny. "We just loved it there. Everyone was so happy and we felt part of the family. Since then, even though we lived 60 miles away, we visited regularly."

When Gerry, a retired fishmonger, started to suffer ill-health, the visits to Apuldram took on a new significance. "Going there kept Gerry alive," said Jenny. "Apuldram was a place we loved together."

After Gerry's death in 2022, Jenny added The Apuldram Centre as a beneficiary in her will – and plans to leave her house to the charity.

"The Apuldram Centre is a very special place... somewhere that's necessary and valuable," said Jenny. "It might be small but it's as important as any other charity, and every penny will make a difference. I hope my gift will provide the financial support for the centre to continue long into the future."
